Alan Hoffler Speaker Bio

Raised around America's Space Program, Alan Hoffler has earned degrees in Aerospace Engineering and Applied Mathematics. But don't let his nerd pedigree fool you. With a coach's passion, a teacher's heart, and an engineer's mind, he creates simple and practical paths to greatness for his audiences. He speaks internationally to audiences of all types and sizes about the power of communication and the power of a coach. He believes those key topics have the power to change a person, an organization, a community, and the world.

When he's not speaking or training, he stays active serving in the local chapter of his professional organization; supporting activities and instructing in his local church; coaching, photographing, and speaking about youth sports; and dreaming about using the privileges of his commercial pilot's license. His blog reveals his desire to improve himself as well as his clients. He is the co-author of 6 Steps Forward, a parable about the stages in a man's life and the author of Presentation Sin, a collection of tips he has learned through his observations as a speaking coach and keynote speaker. His most challenging training endeavor is also his most enjoyable – raising two children.
